Training Cruises of the Class of 1989

Cruising . . .

MYSTERY CRUISE '86

Fort Lauderdale, Florida
Jacksonville, Florida
Dublin, Ireland
Portsmouth, England

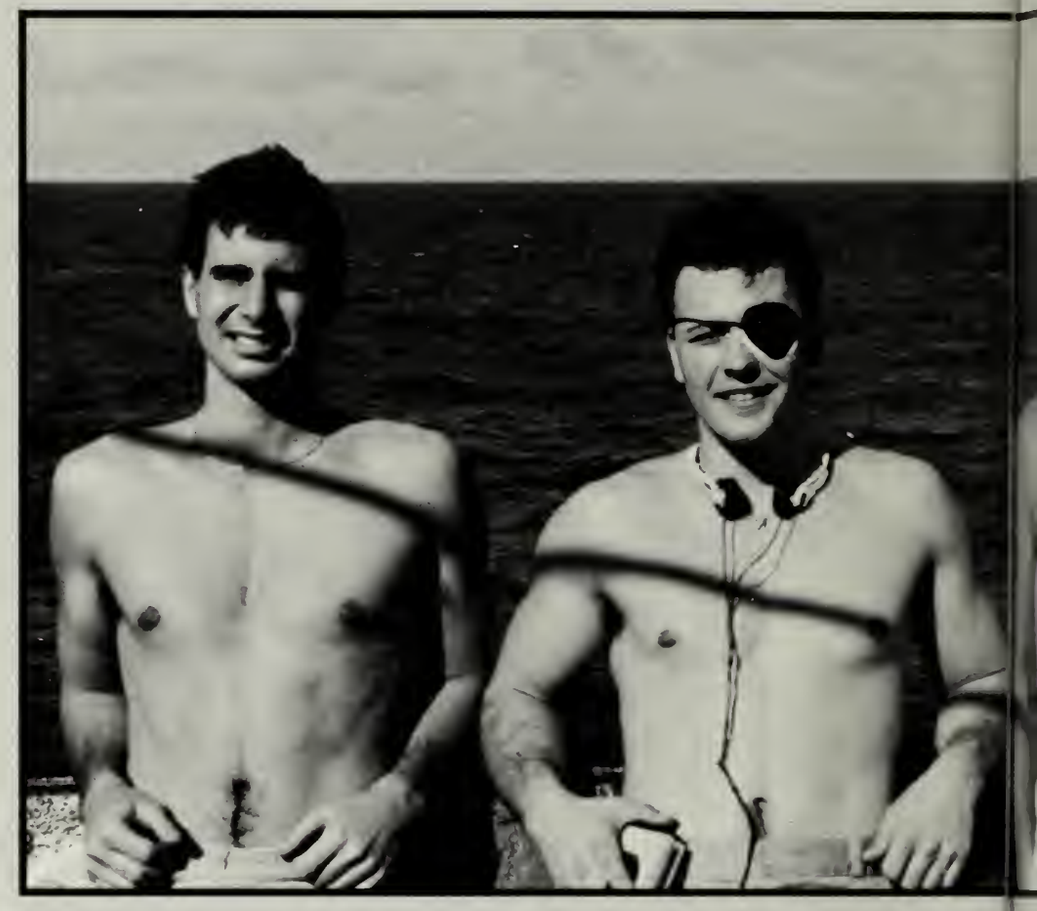
Freshman Cruise? Does anyone in the Class of 1989 remembers their's? After all, it happened four years ago. Thinking about it through, pieces of the "Magical Mystery Tour" do come to mind.

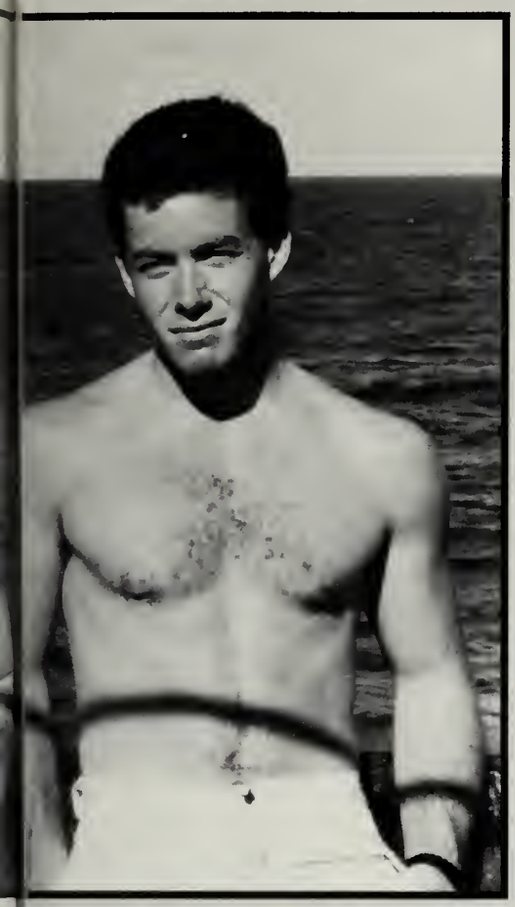
Let's see now, I remember standing on the dock, holding a banner, seeing the Patriot State for the first time, thinking, "Gee, what a big ship, maybe cruise won't be so bad after all." Little did I realize the mix of troubles and good times that would be in store for all of us.

The strip in Fort Lauderdale followed by the shipyard in Jacksonville. Carryover in the boiler? Does that mean we really can't go faster than two knots? Then after more than two weeks at sea, that emerald isle, Ireland. After rolling around on the Irish Sea, I would have settled for Bayonne, New Jersey. Dublin does put Bayonne to shame. Imagine what it would've been like if there was no trash strike?

The Patriot State has got to be the only ship that can make a five hour passage from Dublin to Portsmouth last five years. Little did we realize the incredible number of Williamson turns a ship can make in just one day? The Crown Jewels, the Tower of London, and the Changing of the Guard were worth the circles, though. Whether or not London made up for the less than friendly reception many of us received at Valentino's is still a subject of debate. Thank God for the Royal Navy!

We had plenty of time to heal on our way to Buzzards Bay. Say what you want about P-town, it looked mighty good after days of grey Atlantic. What looked better though was the crowd waiting for us on the dock. Our youngie cruise and our youngie year ended in noisy celebration!





Time At Sea . . .

WORLD TOUR '88

Fort Lauderdale, Florida
Bridgetown, Barbados
Tenerife, Canary Island
Naples, Italy
Palma de Majorca, Spain

Cruise '88 started out well. The Patriot State out of the shipyard, a new Captain, a new Chief Engineer, and Four Hold open for use. The itinerary seemed almost too good to be true, and considering the short history of our ship, problems seemed inevitable.

We set off for Fort Lauderdale as we had the last cruise, and started settling into the cruise rotation. Since we were the only class that had sailed on the Patriot State before, we found seniors asking us questions. The ship seemed overly crowded with all four classes on board. Everyone started looking forward to our first port.

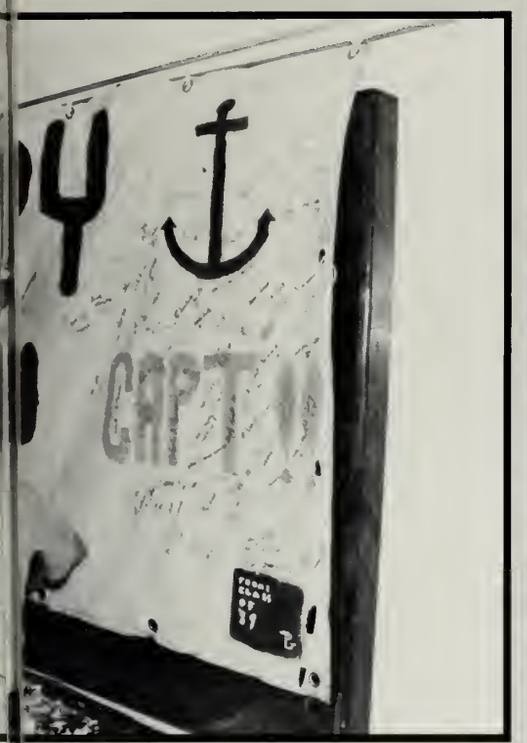
Fort Lauderdale hadn't changed much. The beaches and the Strip were both great. It seemed like we all spent more money than we wanted to. It was nice to be able to wear civilian clothes off the ship, instead of sneaking them off.

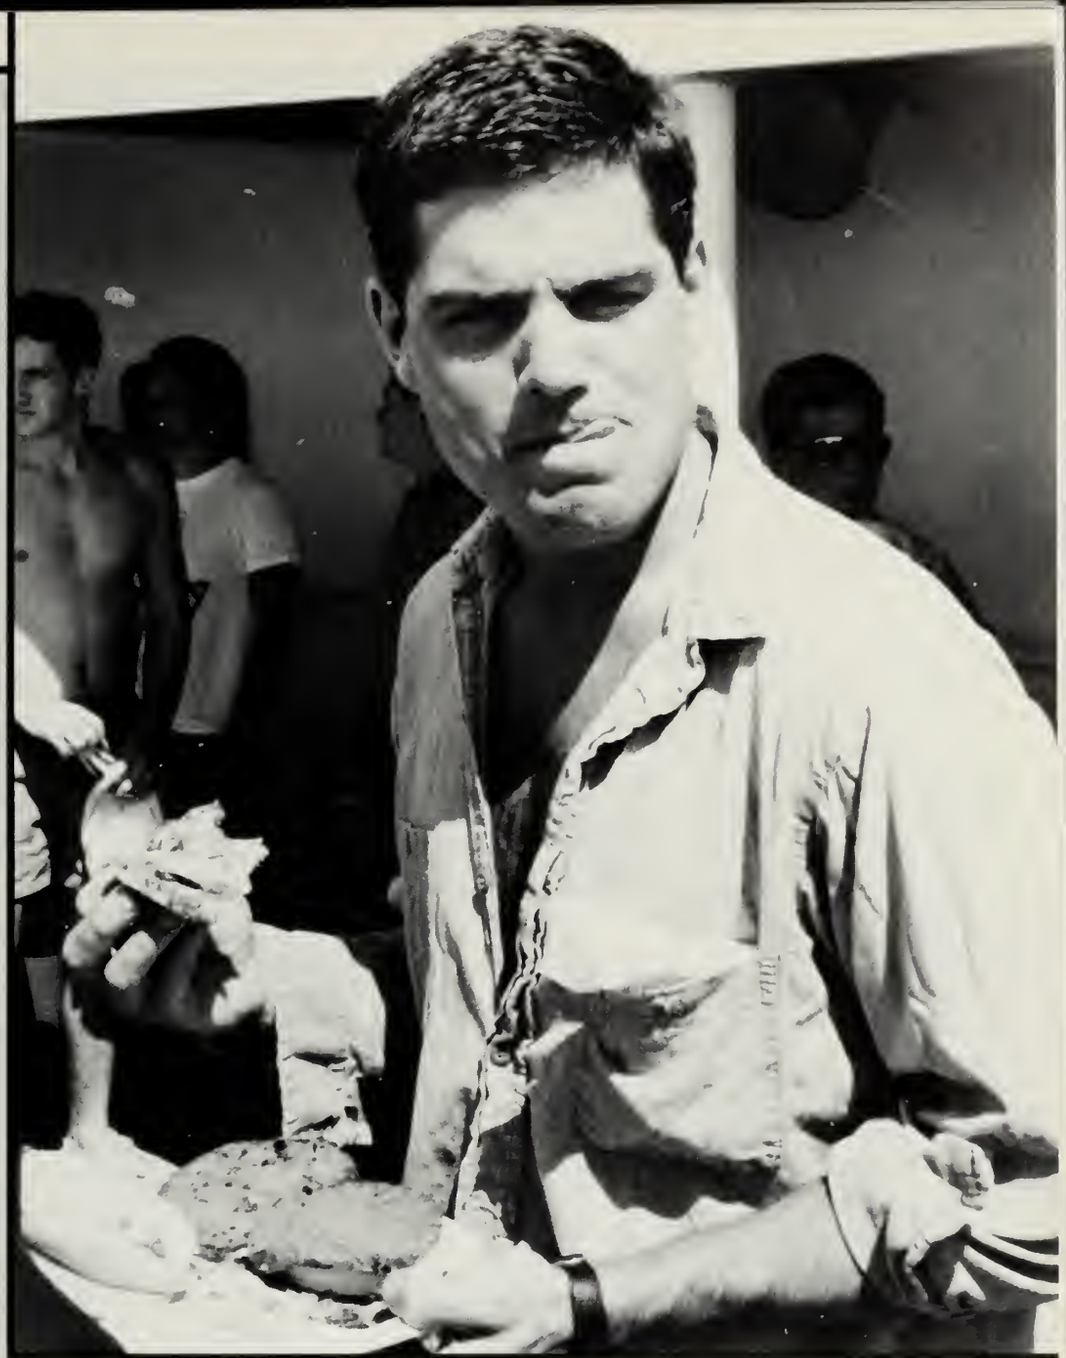
Our next port was a long one. Bridgetown, Barbados for a full week. All the underclass had to get lifeboat qualified, so we had alot of time to see the island. We got to see the extremes of poverty and wealth. We saw all the shocks and the people who lived in them, and we saw the incredible beauty of Sam Lord's Castle and Crane's Beach. The bus rides were an adventure. We did enjoy ourselves, but we were all glad to leave Barbados and get on with cruise. We headed across the Atlantic heading for Tenerife. The island was beautiful. It seemed like mountains and beaches were right next to each other. Only one thing put a damper on the fun. A little incident where the police decided to beat on a few cadets at a bar. So much for Tenerife.

The highlight of cruise was next. Italy. Some of us headed for Rome, some for Pompeii, some just stayed in Naples. Wherever we ended up, it was an incredible experience. Real Italian food, incredible scenery; it was unforgettable.

Palma de Majorca had everyone on a shopping spree for pearls. We didn't have much money left, but we wanted to have a good time before we headed for home.

Finally, we pulled into Buzzards Bay. After such a long cruise, we never wanted to see the ship again. Two cruises down, one to go . . .





Time To Relax . . .

SHELLBACK CRUISE '89

Vera Cruz, Mexico
Trinidad
Curacao
San Juan, Puerto Rico
Port Canaveral, Florida

How will the class of 1989 remember its final cruise with MMA? What experiences will be brought back to mind years later as we leaf through this yearbook and try to recall just what it was like? Most of the experience will have faded in our minds as we are apt to forget the boring and mundane days and instead hold memories of the good times. After all, a day spent with best friends in an exciting foreign port deserves prominence in our minds over a day spent lying in a rack waiting to be one day closer to home.

While the primary purpose of a cruise is to be a training exercise, the training aspect of it will stay with us in our professional lives. It is the once in a lifetime experiences, the special times, and the ports of call that cannot be relived and may be forgotten.

At MMA we experience so much more than a typical college student. Cruise '89 showed us more of the world than most see in a lifetime.

For instance, in Vera Cruz, Mexico, we saw a way of life radically different from our own even though our countries share a border. The dirt, the poverty, and the plight of some children no doubt left an impression on the middle class Americans.

In both Trinidad and Puerto Rico there were reminders that we were outsiders. In Trinidad it was the abuse handed us by the cab drivers who charged us hyperinflated fares or else it was the thieves who marked us as convenient prey. In Puerto Rico one would have to be careful walking down the side of a road as some Puerto Ricans are resentful toward Americans and they showed their feelings by trying to run us down.

There were alot of positive experiences on Cruise '89. The crossing of the line ceremony being one of them for we are now shellbacks and are no longer subject to the initiation into "the mysteries of the Order of the Trident." It was far better to be one of 570 pollywogs on a ship with thirty shellbacks.

We spend a good part of two months steaming around the Caribbean, sitting on tropical beaches and soaking up the sun. Meanwhile, back home, it was a New England winter and even the skiing conditions were lousy. We were in Daytona Beach, Disney World, and Epcot Center. We saw the home of the space shuttle and the opulence of the hotels and casinos of San Juan and Curacao.

We probably won't forget our disappointment when we learned that our stop in Rio de Janeiro, the highlight of the cruise was cancelled. Curacao was nice, but it wasn't Rio.

Buzzards Bay looks good to a cadet three times: the end of each cruise. No matter how well planned the itinerary is or exotic its ports our B-Bay is always the favorite port. Our final cruise is done. Now we only need to cruise to graduation . . .

First, I would like to thank all of my close friends: Kuz, Murph, Tom, Pete and Peter, Dan, and especially Walter. The lessons we have taught each other and learned together will stay with us forever because they could not be taught in any classroom. Suzanne, you too have shown me a lot about life. You are, and always will be, my closest friend. Thank you for your love and support, without it I would be lost and it was more than I could ever have expected. My last thanks goes out to my family, the most important people in my life. To my two brothers who's advice and experience has helped me more than they'll ever know. Finally, Dad . . . I can't thank you enough. You should be proud of the job you have done, I know that Mom is. Everything I do in my life is dedicated to you and the effort you have put into your family. Now its time to move on and see what this world holds for all of us. Again, thank you all.

Cortland, NY

A sincere thank you to all of the friends I have made at MMA. Your support and sense of humor has made the past four years go by quickly; for if we couldn't have laughed, we would have all gone insane. May your lives be filled with blue skies and smooth seas.
